EARLY ONE MORNING A YOUNG BOY STOOD AT A TRAIL- HEAD • BEFORE HIM ROSE A MIGHTY MOUNTAIN, WHICH SEEMED ALL THE

mightier when compared with his smallness • A trail led to the mountain and then up it to incredible heights before vanishing in the clouds • On this trail the boy could see other boys and young men, some beckoned him to follow • The boy began to climb, refusing to be deterred • But soon he began to sweat and breathe heavily • And still the boy climbed • At times he had to go down a little to catch his breath • But still he climbed • At the climber scarcely noticed he had, already, become a hardier of spirit • And so, he stood alone at the top of the world and looked down in his footsteps • And in front of him he saw another mountain • And another • And a whole procession of mountains marching off to the horizon • But the young man (for now he was a man) knew that none of these other mountains was insurmountable, that all could and would be climbed • For he had learned many skills in the climbing of the first mountain, and he would carry those skills with him long after this mountain was forgotten • And besides, he could begin climbing the next mountain tomorrow • Tonight he would rest and celebrate and ponder the journey that he had completed • And so, too, should we rest and celebrate and honor this fine young man
